From the Georgetown Messenger of. March 5. 1817.

Yesterday, being the 4th of Maria

Mr. Monroe was installed into the presidency of the United States .-At an early hour every thing appeared to be in motion; crands were seen flocking towards the itapitol from every direction. Sees after 11 o'clock a great number of gentlemen assembled on horseback in the open space in front of Mr. Monroe's house, where they were formed under the direction of two of their fellow citizens, who had bees chosen marshals of the day. At the appointed time Mr. Monroe, accompanied by Mr. Tompkins, sat out, in his carriage, for the capitol.-He was followed by a great number of carriages and persons on horseback; forming, in the whole, a considerable procession. On his arrival at the capitol hill ne was received with military honors by the marine corps, and some fine corps of volunteers. In front of the capitol a temporary portico had been erected, in which the inauguration egulate the trade in was to take place. This was site rounded by several thousands of persons, among whom were great numbers of well-dressed ladies. Mr. Monroe ascended the portico, iccompanied by Mr. Tompkins, the committee of senators, and the judges. Mr. Madison was also pre-sent, and was placed on the right of Monroe. After the oath had been administered, the new pretident delivered his speech. Although pen air, the delivery was so distinct and the silence of the people was so great, that it was perfectly heard a considerable distance. When the speech was concluded, a federal selute was fired from a detachment of artillery in the capitol square. The procession returned in the same ofder to Mr. Monroe's house. Here, to received the congratulations of the Baltimore. March 7. THE PENITENTIARY. We can now state with regard to the conflagration of the penitentia-ry on Wednesday night st, the ex-tent of the damage. The roof of the wing is entirely consumed, the centre building is untouched by the flame, the cells and the lower floor remain uninjured, but the upper floor is consumed. That part of the building denominated the church, & the kitchen likewise, is totally destroyed. Not a single criminal escaped, not withstanding the fire was evidently kindled for that purpose. A large quantity of oakum picked by the prisoners, was deposited in the garret, and as the flames originated in that part of the building, very little doubt remains but that a coal was placed in one of the bundles. There was a difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply of water, as the gates were shut during all the time of the fire, to prevent the estent hearts to implore the forgive- of citizens resorted to the fire, armcape of the convicts.
